InvestmentStrategy

Ando Magnolija Strategy (AMS) has been tested half year in 2013 and from January 2014 working on a real money account with Yadix. AMS trades on six to eight currency pairs based on an advanced and intelligent net order strategy. In some market conditions AMS uses the strategy of increasing the size of lots being traded; however it should not be considered a Martingale strategy and is not aggressive.

To run at maximum efficiency, the AMS system requires a minimum of $500 per investors. It is advisable that investors be prepared to for a minimum period of three months where the invested funds should not be withdrawn.

The expected monthly returns is +/- 4% to 9%, and during most months the system is delivering consistently a very low drawdown of under 10% only. Last quarter AMS got huge drawdown of 50%. Reason – terrible market conditions in august. From September system working in very safe mode to recover lost funds. Plan is to recover them till end of year 2014.

Risk Management

AMS has a twin level risk management system to protect invested funds. The first risk management function is built-in to the system as an equity protection facility that will mean that should the account reach the level of -20%, the system will not open any new orders and try to close all orders at breakeven. The next level of protection is performed by the manager manually who monitors all real time trading and will manually close all orders reach a level of 25% drawdown to ensure that any negative trading sessions do not reach a level greater than 25% drawdown.

The trade cycle will use a maximum of 4% of equity of the account value per currency pair and will not exceed the 4% level.
